

Eva Kroth

ON THE AURA OF THE BODY AND THE AURA OF THE EARTH

Each layer of our aura vibrates in its own light frequency, which we describe as lower or higher.

We describe lower light frequencies as more dense vibrations and higher ones as more subtle vibrations. The light frequency of our aura increases outwardly. Near our body, the light vibrates more densely. There, the organs and their illnesses are mirrored.

In the next higher light frequency, we find our emotional world with all the experiences we have had in lives past and present. In the next higher light frequency, we find our spiritual development and our integration into society and time.

On the subtlest light vibration level of our aura, all the information of our personality flows together to form a radiant, pastel-colored, bright sphere of light.

This light contains all personal and collective information concerning all our lives on Earth.

Light is information and science is only slowly beginning to discover light as a carrier of information that has an impact on our physical body, our aura, and beyond.

There is a light center in every layer of our aura where all incoming and existent information on our life is transformed to the next higher or lower level. All of this is a flowing, constantly changing, multicolored play of light.

The light centers of our aura are called chakras. We have seven main chakras arranged along our spine in the center of our body.

We live in a world of duality. We judge everything in our life as either positive or negative. All positive experiences, character traits, or lovely events are mirrored as bright colors in our aura. All negative events or illnesses and pain are visible as dark shadows. There, light does not stream unhindered through all layers. There, we are not in the flow of light.

Medication, therapies such as psychoanalysis, and subtle healing methods such as homeopathy and acupuncture activate the flow of light in our body and our aura. All etheric elements flow together and into the body. Everything forms a whole.

Just as we have both a solid body and an etheric one, so too does the Earth have an etheric corpus around the solid body that we know – an etheric energy body, the aura of the Earth. It also vibrates in light frequencies of various densities. Those various frequencies have their equivalent in our aura.

Just as we can call our different aura levels our different dimensions, so too can we call the different aura levels of the Earth its different dimensions.

Via the light frequencies of our own different dimensions we are always in contact with the equivalent dimensions of the Earth.

Therefore, we vibrate both here and there at the same time.

We live in both worlds, but are mostly unaware of it. There is a constant stream of energy pulsating to and fro. Our life and our development on Earth are constantly exchanging energy with all etheric dimensions of the Earth and its creatures. Everything is connected and in exchange, humans, animals, plants, and the Earth.

When we die, we only leave behind our material body, which dissolves. Our etheric body remains and carries on living in other dimensions until we are reborn.

All dimensions are inhabited like the Earth. As the structures in other dimensions are not as solid, we perceive the energy streams more intensely and do not feel as separate from others as here on Earth.

In the etheric dimension, there are also spiritual beings. They are as real as we are. Depending on the culture and the era, these inhabitants are called angels, nature spirits, devils, or demons. The creatures we connect with fear and horror live in high-density dimensions. In Christianity, these dimensions are generally called hell. There are dimensions of different densities, where grief, suffering, and many other forms of negativity prevail. These dimensions are not places for punishment, but places of a restricted awareness. If we transform these restrictions of our awareness and free ourselves from them, we can leave the dimensions behind.

Part of the consciousness of every human being lies in light and dark worlds, whether he or she lives on Earth or in other dimensions. Our feelings are like energy bridges to these worlds. When we strengthen the positivity in us, we open to the lighter worlds.

Based on our wishes, etheric inhabitants of these worlds help us choose one or the other direction. We have the choice to go where we want, in accordance with our higher self. We restrict and expand ourselves with the help of our many lives on Earth. We experience restriction through pain. We experience expansion through happiness and beauty.

If we go to the light worlds after our death, we experience days and nights there as well. We do not perceive the astral night as dark, though, but as silver-colored.

There, too, we fall into a sleep-like state in which we turn to the unconscious unknown without fear. When, after our death, we move into the shadow worlds, we experience day and night there, too. In daytime, we do not see the sun there. The light is pale and gray. The atmosphere is heavy. The night is dark and leaden. If we sleep there, our unconscious part moves into the light world.

We are never separated from the light. Neither are we ever separated from the light in the shadow worlds. In them, we are only restricted and cannot perceive light, as here on Earth, when in deepest unhappiness, we cannot perceive light as a source of joy.

The moon vibrates between light and shadow worlds. It is not a source of light. Its silver energy determines the rhythm between light and dark, day and night, expansion and restriction. In our current life, the moon also determines the rhythm of our life. Its energy makes us oscillate between day and night, consciousness and subconsciousness, feelings of fear and feelings of trust.

Humans, animals, and plants – we all are in contact via our aura, and with the aura of the Earth. Like the Earth, the sun and the moon have an aura too, like all other planets and celestial bodies of our universe.

All suns, moons, planets, and celestial bodies of all universes vibrate with different auras. We are connected to all suns, moons, and celestial bodies of our universe and all other universes via the aura of the Earth. We are in contact and in exchange. In golden and silver light, we are united in light and consciousness and vibrate together in a universal language.

Copyright © by Eva Kroth
Translation from the German: Annette Charpentier,
Copyright © March 2018