

Eva Kroth

THE TONE AND THE ARRIVAL OF THE NEW DIMENSION

Some people believe that we have been living in a new dimension since December 21, 2012. This is reflected in the consciousness of a growing number of people. Others are of the conviction that the new dimension should have arrived on December 21, 2012, but that it was deferred because not enough of us had developed into better humans. The “critical mass of people with a higher consciousness for the ascent” had not been achieved.

I sit at my desk opening my astral awareness. I look at the Milky Way, our home galaxy. Immediately I am in a sea of light of the most fantastic colors and shapes. It is of a transcendental beauty. Everything is pulsating, flowing, and in fluctuation. Stars light up and form solar systems. Matter collapses and implodes. New space-times are evolving.

I see the undertow of the time tunnels that interchange and connect everything. An infinite number of consciousness-space-times touch each other. New developments emerge. Everything is interwoven. Life forms emerge and transform in order to travel further in this fluorescent sea. My consciousness draws me into the center of the Milky Way. I know in my earthly consciousness that the center of our galaxy consists of a black hole that pulls matter in. With my astral eyes, I perceive a tremendously luminous star there. Its light is so strong that I am startled. My consciousness cannot comprehend the power of that light.

The center which we on Earth define as a black hole is, on the astral level, a sun, glowing as strongly as an infinite number of terrestrial suns. It is a center of transformation. Here, consciousness and matter interchange.

All matter within our galaxy is in communion with this center. Here, the impulses for the materialization of all energy within the Milky Way originate and are the source of power. Awareness gained from material experience flows into the light in the center of the galaxy. Impulses of the change flow back again to our space-time.

The center of the galaxy contains the consciousness of the whole Milky Way, with the unimaginable variety of its inhabitants and life forms of all times – of past, present, and future. Even as astral personalities, we are limited beings and cannot fathom the spiritual power of the galactic center. What is required for this endeavor is a great deal of experience and practice in many places and times within the Milky Way, because, in the galactic light, such a vast amount of powerful consciousness unites that we are forced to break with all concepts of space and time and therefore with our notion of any individuality. Everything existent in our galaxy is united there in a powerful source of consciousness – consciousness resulting from ideas for life in all forms and times.

Our sun, too, is a center of consciousness. In its astral interior, its energy condenses to one point: here, time suspends itself. From this point, the sun is in contact with the center of the Milky Way. The sun receives light impulses with ideas for its solar system. It transforms the ideas into time-spaces. Time-spaces become material reality.

We can also imagine a black hole inside the sun, toward which all our experiences flow, collapse, and radiate as new energy from the sun, enriched by our lives. The transformation inside the sun is like a continuous Big Bang toward matter. The Big Bang, or the phenomenon thus described, is condensed light being born into the world of matter. All notions of the development of life in time and space are contained in the light of the Big Bang. Suns are agents of the transformation of light-consciousness to matter. Every one of us, with everything that exists in our material reality, are at the same time, on the astral and spiritual levels, transformers of light-consciousness to matter outside our time. Our terrestrial bodies, too, are transformers of light to consciousness. In every cell, light-consciousness is being transformed into the body.

The center of our sun, which only in our material perception is separated from the center of the galaxy, supplies every cell of our body with energy. For those of us on Earth, the sun is a faraway star that illuminates and determines our living environment. On the astral plane, the sun is a light source composed of consciousness, and we are part of it. As a source of light, it is not separate from the center of the galaxy.

The notions for the many inter-galactic space-times are, in their various forms, born in the center of the galaxy. Our sun transforms. It divides into time and space. It creates its form and the form of its planets. Connected with the forms are specific time-spaces.

The light of our sun is filled with notions of the forms and time-spaces of the planets and their inhabitants. It sends the notions of the different space-times on the planets to their inhabitants. They receive these vibrations on the astral plane, and from there they vibrate to the various space-times of material reality. For many years now, many people on Earth have been receiving consciousness vibrations about the New Age to come. They have incorporated this information into their terrestrial consciousness.

Time and time again, new dates have been named for the impending transformation and then deferred. Others talk of “changes of plan.” But there are no changes of plan. There is nobody on the astral plane who organizes things.

The forthcoming transformation of our space-time is integrated into a limitless cosmic clock of movement and change. Like the other planets, we, with the Earth, are part of the consciousness of the sun. It knows about the transformation of the whole solar system. Together with the sun, we travel to a different space-time.

On December 21, 2012, the sun had opened up for energy from the center of the galaxy. Since that day, processes have taken place inside the sun which prepare for the realization of a transformation. The energy field in the solar system is changing, as it is in our galaxy. Everything is ready. The energy space of the new time is already there, but still only on an astral plane. The sun is ready. On the astral plane, the new time-space is already visible.

The sun is part of the multidimensional galactic clock. The sun knows the cosmic clock and the time of the Earth. It knows that a tone from a faraway dimension will touch it and its solar system.

The sun knows about all celestial bodies and galaxies of our universe. It knows when specific galaxies will implode and when new living spaces will emerge. It passes on the information to the astral world. From there we transform the moveable astral time to our linear time.

The sun is expecting a cosmic event beyond perceptible dimensions. It is conscious of its own time. The galactic clock of the Milky Way is a gigantic transforming clock, in which time is condensed to ever smaller sections, like a wheelwork that transmits time into smaller and smaller units.

Other galaxies have their own clocks with their own times and spaces. Contact points develop where galaxies are in touch and engage in an exchange process. They give each other impulses. Something new emerges. Universes grow and pulsate in a never-ending movement. For the galaxies, the position of higher universal worlds of consciousness determines the transitions in galactic time-spaces. These are consciousness-worlds beyond our imagination.

Everything within the dimensions of the sun known to us, within the solar system and ourselves, is ready for the transition. We open up to something beyond our imagination.

Now I open myself up to a vibrational space, where a faraway galaxy beyond our imaginable world ends its time and transforms itself into an impulse of consciousness. This impulse of consciousness will touch our time. An explosion of light will emerge which we will see in the sky. This is the procreation of the new dimension.

The knowledge of a faraway consciousness will meld with us and everything we know, with what we recognize as our reality. It is like a seed filled with knowledge, falling from the sky into the old time and enabling the birth of a new era.

From this explosion of light a visible tone emerges which will touch us. The tone is the beginning, the procreation of our new dimension. It unites with the sun and its solar system and travels on. For a birth, it needs a touch, a fertilization from outside. New life develops from the amalgamation of inside and outside. The tone is like the procreation of new life, a new life of the sun and its solar system.

The tone dissolves the solid connection of time and space of our old dimension. It also dissolves the solid connection of our consciousness with the unconscious. Many people believe our consciousness expands slowly on its own anyway, but the transition to a new world involves many changes.

Our consciousness determines matter. Over millions of years, it has become as hard as our consciousness has become dense. That was our journey through time: to separate spirit and matter in such a way that we recognize ourselves and consciousness in everything, including matter.

We will experience an enormous transformation and continue the journey through time and space. Both, time and space, will enter into a new and less solid union. That will be our new reality. It will be a world where matter, too, is just as conscious as our spirit. We are still firmly anchored in the accustomed laws of matter. Only the tone of light will loosen this firm anchorage.

Whether we wait for the new time or not, our current life is precious. We can already open up now for the spiritual side of matter. Our old time is ready for change. All consciousness of life and matter, of space and time, is being renewed. We are being fertilized by the history of a time-space alien to us, one that has lived through and ended a long experience. A new consciousness will be carried over to our time.

I know that what I am describing or seeing on the earthly, astral, and spiritual level – my perception – is tied to our notion of time and space. Outside this perception, outside the universe known to us, there are worlds beyond our imagination, as far away as the impulse which will bring us a new beginning.

Copyright © June 2013 by Eva Kroth
Translated from the German: Annette Charpentier, Copyright © 2017